

The Flag

A specially designed Centennial flag (2' x 3') available for purchase to the tourism community.

The flags can be flown from a standard flag pole, mounted to a wall or framed and hung.

Flying the Centennial flag would allow hotels, tourism offices, welcome centers, restaurants, museums, stores, and other tourism-related businesses to show their support for the National Parks and demonstrate the importance of the parks to local economies. As 2016 is a presidential election year, with candidates for every level of government out doing community events, the Centennial flag also offers an educational opportunity to educate policymakers on the importance and scope of the tourism economy.
